SYNOPSIS

In his debut feature, Robin Pront artfully blends gritty kitchen-sink realism, forbidding noir and surprising, post-Coen Brothers humor to reveal a tense, humanistic and emotionally twisted drama of brotherly love and betrayal on the economic margins of contemporary Belgium. THE ARDENNES evokes the same petty criminal milieu as Bullhead (2011), and shares with the film a producer, Bart Van Langendonck, as well as a fixation on the blunt facts of life. Brothers Dave (Jeroen Perceval) and Kenny (Kevin Janssens) are lumpen Flemish hoodlums whose ineptitude causes Kevin to take the fall when a heist goes wrong. Four years later, Kevin is out of prison, but, as he slowly learns, things have changed. Unbeknownst to Kevin, his girlfriend Sylvie, played by Veerle Baetens (The Broken Circle Breakdown), has moved in with his brother Dave and is pregnant with his baby.

Pront uses the unrevealed secret to sustain tension that seesaws against a backdrop of dark farce and tender remorse. We witness one of the uneasiest family Christmas dinners ever, as well as Kevin's ill-fated stint working at a car wash. Anger management is not Kevin's strong suit. Indeed, his feral impulses soon put the brothers on the wrong side of the law again, and in awkward collusion with Kevin's old cellmate Stef, portrayed by the brilliant Jan Bijvoet (BORGMAN) amid a gallery of bizarre characters in the depths of the forest that gives the film its name.

While it nods to such classic crime stories as GOODFELLAS, TRAINSPOTTING and IN BRUGES, THE ARDENNES draws its stylish suspense from the specific, nuanced details of its luckless characters', their lowlife follies and tortured fraternity, underscoring the tragically profound hazards of brotherly love.

LOGLINE

The rivalry between two brothers comes to a slow-burning climax during a sinister trip to the Belgian countryside.

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

THE ARDENNES tells the story of a complex relationship between two brothers – protagonist Dave and his brother Kenneth. Both bear the scars of their shared past, but each deals with it in their own way.

The story pays great attention to character development and unfolds like a crime thriller that reaches its climax in The Ardennes (in Wallonia, the French-speaking southern region of Belgium). I wanted to explore the theme of loyalty between brothers and friends, with a specific focus on the harsh environment of these individuals. This is also a recurring theme in my previous short films, characters who act according to standards and values that are different from what is considered normal, and who live in a world where violence is the solution and drugs are invariably present. I always had a great affinity for people who live at the margins of society and who seek extremes, consciously or not. Despite the dark source material, the story also has its humorous moments, because humor is a part of life – people nevertheless try to make things bearable by finding humor in all situations, even if it might be out of place.

The complicated triangle between Dave, Sylvie and Kenneth is central to the plot. It is the main thrust of the story. None of the three characters are happy with where they are right now in their lives and, although it is easy to portray Kenneth as the ‘bad guy’ of the story, this is not what interests me as a filmmaker. I wanted to explore the grey areas between good and evil and to ask myself why people are the way they are and do what they do. After all, everyone is a cute baby at birth – a blank canvas. The answers to the questions of how Kenneth ends up in jail, whose corpse is in the trunk and why it is there, ensure that the characters are always seen in a different light by the viewer, and that is what I want to achieve.
